TRIPS AWHILE
WHERE TO GO
AND HOW TO GET THERE

This is the Paoli parade ground. It is a beautiful spot, with a lovely view of the surrounding countryside. You can see the whole of the valley from this point.

PAOLI PARADE GROUND.

Now, right opposite, Malvern Hall stands on the right side of the road. It is a lovely old house, with a beautiful garden and a fine view of the surrounding country. You can see the whole of the valley from this point.

THE LANCASTER PIKE TO DOWN-INGTON.

With a Digression to the Paoli Monument:

Had I been a boy of 15 years old, I would have much enjoyed a visit to this spot. It is a lovely old house, with a beautiful garden and a fine view of the surrounding country.

PAOLI AND VICINITY.

The Paoli and the last of our way map. The latter are mud roads that are very much in the same primitive state as the roads we met on the Indian King.

THE LOVELY CHESTER VALLEY.

The ride up the Indian King road is a lovely one. You can see the whole of the valley from this point. It is a beautiful spot, with a lovely view of the surrounding country.

A NEW COSTUMED FROM PARIS.

The costuming is charming, yet a great deal of the romance, courtly style has not been lost.

A POLICE PA.

The illustration here is representative of the present use of masks. They are worn by children, to preserve their eyes and noses from the dust and smoke of the town. In keeping the turkeys in, and keeping the boys in order, they are very useful.

Blessings of the Bike

Dr. J. E. Bennett writes in the Central American: "The bicycle is a very useful and well organized organization of the American people."

"But the feeling of loneliness is re-levied by the thought that at an ever-increasing distance are others: not blushing girls, but a group of boys, who, if they are not comfortable, are too much so.

This was the itinerary of a band of pioneers who, on a trip to the western frontier, were accompanied by a band of boys.
