WHEN TO GO AND HOW TO GET THERE

The White Horse Pike of Camden—County, N. J.

Little do the thousands who now pass over it know that, until a year ago, the White Horse Pike was but a narrow country lane. It is the old worn-out turnpike, the width of which is now often enough for two carriages, but is still so narrow that it is almost impossible to pass two horses abreast.

The track is so steep that some of the Philadelphia & Baltimore Express Co. cars, which pass over it daily, can only manage to keep abreast with one another by occasional stops. The grade is so steep that it is necessary to stop frequently to allow the water to drain out of the buckets of the cars.

THE WHITESTONE MILL

The Whitestone Mill is one of the oldest and most interesting of the old-fashioned mills in the United States. It is situated on the east side of the town, near the river, and is a quaint old building, with a decided appearance of antiquity.

The mill is a large, single-story structure, with a high, steep roof, and is built of stone. The stones are of varying sizes, and are laid in a herringbone pattern. The doors are of wood, and are hinged with iron. The windows are of glass, and are set in an ornamental frame.

The interior of the mill is lighted by small windows, and is furnished with tables, chairs, and other articles of furniture. The walls are decorated with pictures and other decorations, and the floor is covered with a carpet.

A new feature of the mill is the water wheel, which is driven by the water from the river. The water wheel is of iron, and is mounted on a wooden frame. The water is conducted to the wheel by a pipe, which is connected to the river by a sluice gate.

The mill is now used as a warehouse, and is occupied by a large store of goods. The goods are stored in large barrels, which are stacked on the floor. The barrels are of wood, and are tightly closed with hoops.

THE OLD TURNPIKE ROAD

The old turnpike road is a narrow, winding, and tortuous road, which winds through the country for many miles. It is a favorite with the motorists, who enjoy the scenery and the quiet of the country.

The road is well-maintained, and is kept in good condition. It is a gravel road, and is well-drained. The gravel is of good quality, and is well-surfaced. The road is shaded by trees, and is a pleasant place for a drive.
